Press Release — Uno Pouf by Claesson Koivisto Rune

Uno Poufs 50 cm Brown, 65 cm Green & 65 cm Cream.

Of course, you can sit on a mushroom. Maybe use it as a backrest? Uno is function and fantasy combined. A friendly reminder from nature in two sizes. For old and young. If furniture typologies have been stuck in rigid forms for too long time, we are now craving for new and open-minded approaches. Say welcome to a flexibility that allow for spaces to be born again and again. And also, to furniture endowed with character that will bring to life any kind of interior with objects that are almost alive. The roundish structure of Uno is soft to the touch and will yield a happy environment, both as a single item or as a whole group. Uno is Japandi design at its core: Scandinavian minimalism combined with full-blown Japanese tactile craftsmanship, and a hallmark of the Swedish architecture and design studio Claesson Koivisto Rune.

'Design objects needs to be friendly, not hard, sharp, or aggressive,' says Eero Koivisto, 'design should make you comfortable and at ease.' There is an obvious pragmatism in how easily the pouf can be moved around, and how the recessed base allows for the foot when raising up from a seated position.

'Uno was designed for a hotel where flexibility is of paramount importance. Perched on a seating without backrest, as in the Far East, you will also adopt a more active body language.' Eero Koivisto notes that benches and stools are common in Japan, they make for an attentive seating position and vibrant discussions.

Uno is no exception to care and attention to details. A finely crafted structure in wood supports a padding material of different density: firm yet soft. 'We do furnish both homes and public spaces in new ways today,' explains Margot Barolo, Design and Product Development Manager at Design House Stockholm, 'We sit differently, closer to the floor, bringing kids and grown-ups together, something which was quite rare in the past. And also allowing for a new flexibility where design caters to different purposes.'

Uno came to life when Claesson Koivisto Rune renovated the legendary Grand Hotel Terminus in Bergen, Norway. The hotel's Amundsen Whisky bar was to remain almost identical with its warm, amber-colored interior framed by beams and paneling all in wood, along with impressive high windows. Almost the same as when the explorer Amundsen 1928 held his press conference by the big fireplace, before disappearing on his last Arctic rescue mission. Uno complements Finn Juhl's Pelican chairs along with luscious sofas and small tables in the historic setting, allowing for an even more easily reconfigurable space.
